Scandinavian Inspired

WITH THEIR KITCHEN originally confined to a small closed-in spot crunched in the back of their house, this couple wanted to expand and modernize their 1960s home with a contemporary, European design. Requesting an opened and rearranged space with a sleek Scandinavian aesthetic to better suit their lifestyle, they hired Stephanie Brick of Nicely Done Kitchens & Baths.

Starting the complete gut job, Brick eliminated all the walls in the main living area and relocated the kitchen to the opposite side of the home for better flow and use of space. She incorporated a centerpiece island complete with a cooktop, generous prep space, and bar-height seating, allowing the couple to enjoy each other and company while cooking. Cascading elegantly over the sides of the seating area, the bold white quartz waterfall island top contrasts expertly with the black perimeter countertops.

Bold and sleek, the palette of red, white, and black cabinetry is softened and complemented by a muted gray backsplash and wall color. Modern amenities and appliances are hidden behind high-gloss cabinetry paneling for streamlined style. Floating ruby-red cabinets on both sides of the kitchen contribute to the distinctly modern aesthetic. Unique, balanced elements like this can be seen throughout this Scandinavian-inspired design. Learn more about this designer at www.nicelydonekitchens.com. «
